It has been over a year since Hurricane Harvey made its landfall in the midst of recovery from the worst energy downturn in the last three decades. Market and economic indicators strongly suggest that the downturn is finally over, and robust growth has returned to Houston’s economy. Oil is trading at a stable $70/barrel range, above break-even cost for most producers. Driven by the rebound in commodity prices, growing global demand and OPEC production cuts, exploration budgets and drilling permits have risen dramatically, resulting in a rebound in the rig count and more companies reporting profits than losses. This in turn is boosting oil and gas-related sectors including manufacturing and professional services.

The Houston region’s employment growth rate of 4.3 percent for the 12 months ending September, surpassed all other MSA’s in the country. Though bolstered by the oil industry recovery and Hurricane Harvey job gains, employment gains have primarily been within professional and business services, and not in energy. The energy sector’s recovery has not translated into positive office leasing, as a leaner, technologically-advanced and more efficient energy industry emerged from the downturn, requiring a smaller workforce. Ironically, the industry is also facing a talent shortage, in spite of the fact that it has not hired close to half as many employees as were laid off: of the 93,900 jobs lost from the peak to the trough of the downturn (Dec. 2014 to Jun. 2018), the industry has added only 19,600 jobs, or 21 percent. This is due to the shortage of quality tech talent required to work with new and evolving digital technologies in this efficiency-driven energy industry, including big data/analytics, robotics/AI, machine learning and automation. Lower demand for office space due to technological efficiencies and skills shortages in the energy industry have thus slowed absorption of space Downtown.
SUMMARY (CONTINUED)

Downtown’s office vacancy remains elevated at about 20 percent: new inventory from Hines, sublease space returning to landlords as lease terms expire (including Shell’s 126,000-SF space at One Shell Plaza), and previously announced restructuring/downsizing or exits hitting the market, are among the contributors. As flight to quality persists, particularly for professional services, legal and financial firms who are willing to pay higher rates in high-quality or new buildings, new construction and Class A buildings will lead in the recovery, outperforming their B and C counterparts. Tenants’ desire for experiential, amenity-rich and efficient offices to attract and retain top talent has resulted in relocations to new or renovated properties. Relocating to newer and more efficient Downtown buildings has allowed firms to shrink their footprints, but this has come at the cost of higher availability rates, as the bulk of these tenant movements are within Downtown, leaving vacancy in their wake. Underscoring the demand for new construction, Hines broke ground on a new 1 million-SF tower this quarter for delivery in 2021, securing 367,000-SF in pre-leases from Vinson & Elkins (V&E) and Hines (new HQ). However, with this move, V&E will downsize by more than 80,000-SF of its current space in 1001 Fannin. Despite high availability, Downtown retained the highest average asking rents at quarter end, at $42.39/SF gross, and Hines’ new 801 Texas has set a record for highest rates ever quoted for a Houston office property, with rates above $60 per SF gross.

Of the 17 largest office leases signed so far this year in Houston, nine were in Downtown—the most from any one submarket. Accounting for the bulk of the region’s robust leasing activity, Downtown recorded close to a million-SF in lease transactions in the third quarter, with Vinson & Elkins’ 208,000-SF lease at Hines’ new 801 Texas being the largest. Law firms and other professional and financial services firms continue to be key drivers of leasing activity. Kirkland & Ellis expanded its space in 609 Main by over 65 percent (an additional 56,000-SF), occupying a total of about 162,000-SF, and bringing the building up to 69 percent leased. Ernst & Young LLP (EY) renewed its 121,000-SF space at 5 Houston Center (1401 McKinney), with recent renovations to the building cited as integral to the firm’s decision to extend its lease. Sable Permian Resources LLC leased 97,650-SF in Pennzoil Place-North Tower (700 Milam). Downtown also attracted several new tenants including two headquarters: 28-year-old refining services company, Cryptaphase, is relocating its corporate headquarters from Greenspoint to TOTAL Plaza (1201 Louisiana) and doubling its footprint; and Petrologistics II LLC, a new $500 million petrochemical company will move into its first headquarters in 811 Louisiana in November 2018. Canadian oil and gas tech startup, Validere, relocated its headquarters from Calgary to Downtown Houston (708 Main—WeWork building) in order to be at the heart of the energy capital of the world. Litigation funding firm, Validity, opened its first Houston office in Downtown at Pennzoil Place-North Tower (700 Milam). Leasing activity is only expected to continue to gain momentum as oil prices show continued stability.
On the hospitality front, Brookfield has kicked off a $7.5 million renovation of the Doubletree Hotel at 400 Dallas, slated for completion in summer 2019; and Wortham Theater has re-opened after a year-long closure for extensive Hurricane Harvey repairs and renovations costing about $100 million. For the fourth time, Houston won a bid to host the NCAA Men’s Basketball Final Four Championship in 2023; and the Astros have extended their lease at Minute Maid Park through 2050.

Downtown’s residential market performance continues to exceed expectations, with an occupancy rate of 83.9 percent in the third quarter, a stark contrast to 62.3 percent the year before (the lowest occupancy rate in the Houston region). In July 2018 alone, commercial real estate firm, Berkadia, reported a 21.6 percent growth in Downtown’s occupancy rate compared to the year before. Downtown also had the highest monthly rent average, reaching $2,032 by the end of the third quarter. Downtown now has close to 9,000 residents, up from 3,800 in 2012. Growing interest in Downtown’s expanding residential neighborhoods is attributed to the renewed focus on creating a pedestrian- and resident-friendly environment. National Real Estate Investor recognized Downtown as the fifth biggest submarket in the U.S. for new apartment construction, citing attractiveness to developers due to the oil and gas recovery and improved job growth, which have helped fuel demand for apartments. There is also a clear demand for condo units in Downtown. Downtown’s newest high-rise condo tower, Marlowe (1311 Polk), is already 83 percent sold. Strong job growth and renewed energy sector growth have contributed to strong apartment demand and rent growth.

Downtown’s economy is expected to continue to grow at a healthy pace; but sustained strong job growth and higher oil prices that translate into absorption of office space over time are needed to return Downtown’s high office vacancy rates to historical averages. Downtown’s revitalization into a live, work, play environment that is walkable and amenity-rich will continue to be key to its continued success.

Market Overview

RESIDENTIAL

Marlowe condo building at 1311 Polk is already 83 percent sold, with only 17 units left on the market. Not only is the interest in living Downtown very high, this building’s performance is indicative of the increasing demand for for-sale units in Downtown. (The Marlowe)

The Star apartments at 1111 Rusk has completed and opened its parking garage and amenities. The 286-unit apartment’s new amenities include a rooftop sky terrace, state-of-the-art fitness center, heated resort style pool, private theater room, dog spa, social lounge with demonstration kitchen, and a club room with gaming area and golf simulator. (The Star)

At 83.9 percent occupancy at the end of Q3 2018, up from 63.2 percent the year before, Downtown has almost reached the 9,000-resident mark. Up from 78.5 percent occupancy at the end of the second quarter, Downtown remains one of the region’s fastest growing residential markets by occupancy. Inventory has stabilized, allowing for existing properties to fill up. (HBJ, Berkadia)

Hines, in partnership with Ivanhoé Cambridge, has kicked-off construction on a new, 47-story, 1 million-SF office tower at 800 Texas (the former Houston Chronicle site). Slated to open in late 2021, the tower has two anchor tenants: Houston’s largest law firm, Vinson & Elkins signed a 16-year lease for 212,000-SF (top seven floors) and will relocate from 1001 Fannin; Hines signed a 15-year lease for 155,000-SF (five floors) and will relocate its global headquarters from Williams Tower in Uptown to the new building, putting the new tower at 33 percent pre-leased. Designed by Pelli Clarke Pelli Architects, this ‘next-generation’ building will achieve LEED Platinum and WELL Building certifications, have an internal 11-level garage with more than 1,500 parking spaces, and offer unprecedented amenities to support employee recruiting, retention and collaboration. (HBJ, RNR, Bisnow)

A partnership between Cameron Management and Silverpeak Real Estate Partners, represented by HFF, sold 1001 McKinney to a partnership between TRC Capital Partners LLC and Amstar America LLC. The 23-story, 375,440-SF historic landmark Art Deco building was recently renovated and includes an attached parking garage, and was 76 percent leased at closing (HBJ, RNR)

5 Houston Center (1401 McKinney) recently underwent renovations including a remodeled lobby with a newly constructed high-tech tenant lounge, a state-of-the-art fitness center and a new curated coffee concept in the works. The 580,000-SF Class-A office tower was built in 2001. (Bisnow)

OFFICE

412 Main, the former historic State National Bank Building, has been sold by its owner SNB 412 Main LP to Highrock Hospitality LLC. The 13-story, 53,592-SF building’s façade was recently renovated and received a Historic Preservation and Restoration Reimbursement Grant from TIRZ3/ Downtown Redevelopment Authority. The new owner intends to develop the property into a hotel. (DRA)
OFFICE (CONTINUED)

M-M Properties began renovation and expansion of the 56-story Bank of America Center (700 Louisiana) in August. Initially scheduled to start in early 2018, now at a higher budget of $20 million, renovations include an 8,000-SF white tablecloth restaurant in the old Western Union part of the building, a 10,000-SF coworking space on the second floor, a coffee and wine bar in the banking hall, a conference center and open seating for tenants. (HBJ)

Hilcorp Energy Co. earned a spot on Fortune’s 2018 “100 Best Workplaces for Millennials” list, taking the No. 67 spot. Recently, Houston was rated among the top 10 best cities for Millennials. The region was also among the top 10 metros that saw the largest increase in Millennials from 2010 to 2015. (HBJ)

Chevron has demolished the former Houston Press building at 1621 Milan, which it purchased in 2013. According to Chevron, the 41,202-SF low-rise building, dating back to 1923, has reached the end of its useful life. Future site plans are TBD. (HBJ, Bisnow)

Co-working company Level Office (the largest owner-operator of shared office space) has rebranded as Novel Coworking. Novel Coworking has two locations Downtown: 405 Main and 720 Rusk. In 2017, the company was named the third fastest-growing real estate company in the nation by Inc. magazine. (NovelCoworking, HBJ)

HOTEL

AC Hotel by Marriott is on track for completion in June 2019. A redevelopment of the Houston Bar Center building at 723 Main, the building is being converted into a 185-key upscale hotel by Marriott.

Brookfield Properties has kicked off a ‘radical’ renovation at Doubletree by Hilton Hotel-Houston Downtown, just over a year after acquiring the hotel at 400 Dallas. The renovated hotel will serve as the social hub of the newly renovated Allen Center. Renovations will wrap up in summer 2019. (HBJ)

Located in the heart of the Theater District, the 12-story, 93-room historic luxury Lancaster Hotel is now open after a temporary ten-month closure for a multimillion-dollar renovation and interior design refinement following flooding caused by Hurricane Harvey. Acknowledging its 1926 charm, the landmark hotel, has been redesigned into a next-century service hotel with a curated collection of over 200 contemporary works of art by more than 100 internationally recognized and respected Texas artists, such as Mark Flood, Terrell James, Donald Moffett, Margo Sawyer, and Donald Judd. RETAIL

The revamped Lancaster Hotel is home to a new modern fine dining restaurant, Cultivated F+B, at 701 Texas. The space previously occupied by its predecessor Bistro Lancaster went through a complete interior design refinement and renovation, with new sidewalk seating. It is the perfect respite for a casual meal, power breakfast, pre-theater dinner or post-performance nosh. With a touch of 1926 charm and a modern vibe, the new bar provides inventive cocktails and vintage wine service. (Website, Chronicle)

The Hobby Center for the Performing Arts has unveiled its new signature restaurant—Diana American Grill—which replaces Artista. Named for the late Diana Hobby, who was instrumental in creating the performing arts center, the new eatery at 800 Bagby serves an elegant menu of classic dishes. The revamped indoor-outdoor space highlights views of the skyline, and seats 180. Diana is open Tuesday through Sunday. (EATER, HBJ)

Etro Lounge is now open at 114 Main. The night club moved from its Montrose location into a larger venue Downtown in August. Known for Electro, Disco, EDM, and 80s dance music, Etro is now able to host live music shows in the larger venue. (EATER, HBJ)

New fully-fledged tiki and rum bar Kanaloa is now open Downtown across from Market Square Park at 311 Travis. Created by Tyler Barrera, Keith Doyle, and Roland Keller, the bar provides the full-on tiki experience with a relaxing Polynesian vibe, coupled with a patio/private courtyard. Kanaloa carries at least 90 different rums, the bar’s menu features 15 signature cocktails, most of which pay close homage to their original recipes, from island classics like the Mai Tai and immortal Hurricane, to tiki creations of their own. Local Korean taco food truck stars, Oh My Gogi, serve the bar’s food menu. (Website, Houston Food Finder, Houstonia, abc13)

KHOU Ch. 11 debuted their Downtown Avenida Studio in September. Located on the ground floor of the George R. Brown Convention Center, the 780-SF satellite studio at 1001 Avenida De Las Americas will be used several times a week on its newscasts, Great Day Houston and other KHOU programming and specials. With flexibility to open onto the plaza, the new studio will enable reporters to directly engage with the public and be at the center of major Downtown events. (KHOU, HBJ)

New cocktail bar One Armed Scissor has opened its doors at 208 Travis. Previously located at the Hughie’s Tavern in the Heights, the popular cocktail bar from owner/barman Michael Molina was ‘reborn’ Downtown in August. One Armed Scissor aims to serve the community as a neighborhood bar, providing a quieter, more intimate experience. Serving a cocktail menu with interesting names like Trinidad James, Thai Dollar Sign and the Working Title. (Website, Culturemap, Houstonia)

Saint Arnold’s new Beer Garden & Restaurant is open at 2000 Lyons Ave. A new addition to the existing brewery, the outdoor/indoor oasis combines beer, food, architecture, and art seven days a week, and amazing views of Downtown’s skyline. The new beer garden and restaurant will serve favorites from the existing Beer Hall and several new dishes. (Website)
Saint Arnold Brewing Co. won two medals at the 2018 Great American Beer Festival for its Amber Ale and Oktoberfest beers. This brings its total number of medals to 26. More than 8,000 beers from over 2,400 U.S. breweries competed at the festival. (HBJ)

Nestled in Historic Market Square, Sapporo Japanese Sushi & Bar is now open at 801 Congress. Open seven days a week, Sapporo serves a variety of traditional and specialty sushi rolls, as well as other Japanese fare. (Sapporo Houston, Downtown District)

An innovative space to support Houston entrepreneurs and showcase local talent, Social Graces Social Club is now open at 1201 Fannin. The Clubhouse includes a mix of retail, a member lounge, co-working, video production, and rentable meeting and event space. It also serves as the home of Real Beauty Real Women’s innovation hub for digital media and community impact. OTHER DEVELOPMENTS

Downtown’s newest immersive installation, Open House, gives visitors an architectural gaze into Houston’s past and present. Located at 1100 Bagby, the new interactive art installation in Sam Houston Park is open to the public through February 2019. Open House was created by Dan Havel and Dean Ruck and is part of Downtown District’s Art Blocks initiative. (365thingsinhouston, DowntownHouston, VisitHouston, Culturemap)

The Houston Astros have extended their lease at Minute Maid Park, where the professional baseball team has played since 2000. The original lease set to expire in 2030, now extends through 2050. Planned improvements, dubbed “Minute Maid Park 2.0,” will focus on increasing gate capacity, improving entrance and departure efficiency, another addition along the view deck and more community areas. (HBJ)

State transportation officials have voted to seek proposals for the design and construction of the Downtown segments of the North Houston Highway Improvement Project (NHHIP), centered on re-routing I-45. The schedule projects a contract award for construction in March 2020. The $7 billion project, with $3 billion dedicated to Downtown, calls for relocating I-45 to flow parallel to U.S. 59 on the east side of Downtown, eliminating the Pierce Elevated, and a redesign of the interchanges between I-45, U.S. 59, and I-10. The changes would dramatically improve travel times into Downtown and create new civic opportunities for green public spaces. (Chronicle)

Downtown Houston Library is now open on Sundays from 1 to 5 pm to benefit students and patrons that depend on its services including computer and WiFi access and job search. The library now also offers ‘WiFi in your pocket,’ where patrons can check out/take home mobile WiFi for three weeks. (Houston Public Media)

Spotlight on Downtown Houston

LOCAL MEDIA

Sept. 10, 2018
DOWNTOWN’S NEW CALCULUS: Q&A WITH SANFORD CRINER, CBRE VICE CHAIRMAN AND NATIVE HOUSTONIAN

RNR: Is downtown still an attractive location for companies to locate? Sanford W. Criner: Yes, and that’s not opinion. It’s being proven in real time by the construction of Skanska’s Capital Tower and the new Hines building. The new construction (and the leases that made it possible) reflects a change in demand for a higher quality workplace, and a willingness to pay for it. The world of downtown is changing with a new generation of buildings. RNR: What do you see for the future of downtown, say 10 years from now? Sanford W. Criner: Nothing but good things. Downtown will continue to be a more and more vital and important part of the city. People want places to go with street life and cultural events and the future of the downtown Houston office market will be a function of its success as a place to live, work, and play. —Realty News Report

6 OPPORTUNITIES TO WATCH IN DOWNTOWN HOUSTON

“After the rollout of initiatives like Plan Downtown, Downtown Houston is emerging as an urbanized reflection of its former self. Downtown is now home to many more residents with a lot more to do, eat and see. Densification will continue as projects launch to cater to the needs of the growing submarket. Grocery Shortage? It’s only a matter of time before an urban version of a major brand like H-E-B or Whole Foods enters the corridor, but shopping at a grocery store a few miles away will not deter families from living in Downtown. Cheers To Food Halls… Bravery, Lyric Market, Conservatory and Finn Hall are expected to be game changers. A New Day, More Residents…. As apartments remain in high demand, so will increased investment and interest in for-sale condos. Downtown’s residential population is rising monthly, jumping from 3,800 in 2013 to more than 8,000 residents in May.” —Bisnow

HOUSTON IS A TECH CITY, JUST DIFFERENT THAN AUSTIN, DALLAS

Houston can learn a few real estate tricks from its in-state neighbors, but it should also embrace what it is good at, and not lose sight of the fact that it is a major healthcare and energy hub. “Houston is a technology city, the technology that goes into the energy business is second to none.” The Houston office sector has become more competitive in attracting and retaining the business community. The quality of Houston’s new office developments is outshining those in other Texas metros. Skanska’s Capitol Tower has been described as a game-changer. Hines is planning a next-generation office tower. Almost 5,000 residents moved Downtown within the last five years, but also an influx of street-level retail, food trucks and food halls. All of this is aimed to make downtown Houston more attractive to millennials and emerge as a thriving live-work-play environment.” —Bisnow

HOUSTON TO HOST 2023 MEN’S FINAL FOUR

Houston has won a bid to host the Men’s Basketball Final Four® in 2023. “Returning the Final Four to Houston in 2023 will be a slam dunk. I’m overjoyed that the NCAA recognized this fact,” Mayor Turner said. “From our restaurants, to our convention center, hotels, and retail spaces, Houston is poised to provide a total fan experience. The 2016 Final Four in Houston was a huge success. We will also host an NCAA Men’s Regional in 2020. So when the Final Four returns, we will be seasoned hosting veterans.” Houston realized $250 million in economic impact from the 2016 event, the second-highest total in history… “Houston’s on a roll … We are part of the winning 2026 World Cup bid, we landed 2024 College Football Playoffs and just successfully hosted not only the 2016 Final Four, but also Super Bowl LI. This proves we know how to host multiple big events in succession. —City of Houston
ASTROS SIGN NEW LEASE AT BALLPARK THAT SPURRED DOWNTOWN GROWTH

It’s ironic that news of the Astros extending their lease at Minute Maid Park through 2050 barely registers on the sports landscape. This may not seem like a big deal right now, but in the early ’90s, one of the chief arguments from opponents was that no one would go downtown to see a ballgame and stadiums would have little or no impact on development. Wrong on both counts. From Discovery Green to new living spaces, much of downtown’s east-side development can be traced to the Astros stadium. Minute Maid Park was the lynch pin in a plan that, at one point, few believed would work. —Houston Press

FIVE SUB-MARKETS WITH THE MOST NEW APARTMENT UNITS

“New apartment construction on a national basis may be slowing down a bit compared to the past few years, but it by no means has come to a halt. Here are the top five submarkets that saw the opening of the most new apartment units over the year that ended in the second quarter of 2018.

Downtown Houston: Apartment developers have returned to Houston, which has finally recovered from the energy downturn that sent the apartment market into a tailspin. Developers opened 2,473 new apartments in the River Oaks neighborhood and downtown Houston over the year that ended in the second quarter of 2018. That makes the neighborhoods the fifth biggest submarket in the U.S. for new apartment construction. People who lost homes to Hurricane Harvey in 2017 and improved job growth helped fuel demand for apartments.”

HOUSTON IS THE NEW CAPITAL OF SOUTHERN COOL

“We’ve been hearing the buzz for a few years now: Houston may, sneakily, be America's best food city. Houston is America's fourth-largest city, an international metropolis of great institutions and great wealth. It has professional sports teams; it has operas and ballets. The turning point in the emergence of the city’s food scene was the annus mirabilis of 2012. Shepherd opened Underbelly that year. A few years earlier, Justin Yu, a Houston-born chef, returned to town and created Oxheart where he won a James Beard Award. A scene was being born—one that, its participants quickly realized, had the potential to invent a culinary identity where there hadn’t been one before. Yu recently transformed Oxheart into the less rigid Theodore Rex (another 2018 GQ Best New Restaurant). Houston’s qualities—community and affordability—shouldn’t be underestimated, and maybe it’s the sense of defiance that ultimately defines Houston’s cool—the sense that a city where cool isn’t the primary commodity can afford to lie back and let the world come to it, whenever the world catches on.

“The new Kinder High School for the Performing And Visual Arts in downtown Houston is designed as a “beacon of creativity” by project architect Gensler’s Houston office. Occupying a full city block in downtown Houston, the new flagship HISD facility replaces, upgrades and expands the existing HSPVA. A magnet school for music, theater, writing, dance and art, the $88.3 million project funded primarily by HISD received a lead gift of $7.5 million from the Kinder Foundation. The new 5-story building’s 168,000-SF accommodates: a central 800-seat theater, a 200-seat black box theater, rehearsal rooms, an arts gallery, academic classrooms and commons, a recording studio, a roof terrace and a cafeteria, plus administration and faculty spaces. Projected to open for students in January 2019, the new school can accommodate 750 with room to grow. “A cutting-edge beacon of creativity,” the new building retains the communal-collaborative-contemplative mojo of the existing campus with interspersed academic classrooms and specialty spaces, and state-of-the-art technology. Kinder HSPVA is located one light rail stop away from Houston’s Theater District, suggesting possible partnerships and convenient access. Located near other residential and mixed-use development projects, the school is helping “invigorate the area.”
